The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which Applicant regards as the invention. The terms "such as" (claim 1, line 1), "preferably" (claim 1, line 4; claim 4, line 2), and "if so desired" (claim 12, line 3) are vague, and indefinite as to the limitations intended. Claims 2, 3, 5-11 and 13 depend from indefinite claims, and are therefore themselves indefinite.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5 and 7-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fickel et al (U.S. Patent No. 4,454,198) in view of Soehngen (U.S. Patent No. 4,276,179), further in view of Tymstra et al (U.S. Patent No. 2,367,384). Fickel et al discloses the claimed invention with the exception of the presence of a hydrophobic substance immobilized in the pores of the powdery polypropylene, and the step of regenerating this resultant material. Soehngen teaches (see col. 13, line 63 through col. 14, line 27) impregnating a polyolefinic adsorbent with a hydrophobic liquid or solid, in order to enhance the hydrocarbon contaminant adsorption capability of this polyolefinic adsorbent material. Accordingly, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to immobilize a hydrophobic substance of the type disclosed by Soehngen into the pores of the powdery polypropylene of Fickel et al, in order to obtain the advantages disclosed by this secondary reference for the system of the primary reference. Furthermore, Tymstra et al discloses regenerating an oil adsorbent material with steam (see page 3, left column, lines 19-20); and it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to regenerate the oil removing material of the modified primary reference in this manner, in order to allow this modified primary reference material to be reused.

Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fickel et al, Soehngen and Tymstra et al as applied above, and further in view of Larson et al (U.S. Patent

Art Unit: 1724

No. 4,302,337). The modified primary reference discloses the claimed invention with the exception of the use of polystyrene as the immobilized hydrophobic substance. Larson et al discloses removing hydrocarbon contaminants from an aqueous stream with a foraminous material such as polypropylene foam (see col. 3, line 43) impregnated with polystyrene (see col. 4, line 49). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to substitute the polystyrene of Larson et al for the immobilized hydrophobic substance of the modified primary reference, since this polystyrene is capable of enhancing the hydrocarbon adsorption capability of a polypropylene adsorbent material in substantially the same manner as the immobilized hydrophobic substance of the modified primary reference, to produce substantially the same results.
